Dear Friend:

It’s been a long, hot summer in D.C. as Congress battles over federal spending priorities under the shadow of a huge and growing national debt. Over $200 billion has been designated for military action in Iraq and Afghanistan, yet our troops still lack essential equipment, and returning soldiers and vets face an underfunded VA (p. 2).

The national highway and transit bill is long overdue and I’ve been working to hammer out an agreement for this needed investment (p. 3). A decade of failed U.S. trade policies are threatening our economic stability and national security (below). As gas prices skyrocket, we need a new, long-term energy plan and short-term solutions to reduce our dependence on foreign oil and protect consumers (p. 3). Also, vital “county payments” funding expires soon, yet the president hasn’t backed renewal of the program (p. 2).

I would like to hear from you on these and other issues. There is a list of town hall meetings on page 4, please come. You can also express your opinions on federal issues by filling out and returning the enclosed survey. It is important to hear your views so I can better represent you in Washington, D.C.

Sincerely,

PETER DeFAZIO
Member of Congress

Trading Away the U.S.A.

U.S. free trade policies over the last two decades have been a bipartisan failure. Failed trade policies have led to the export of millions of high-paying American jobs, a decline in U.S. living standards, soaring trade deficits, a hollowing out of our nation’s manufacturing capacity, and the dumping of subsidized foreign goods. The U.S. has ceded sovereignty to international trade bureaucrats, who can force the U.S. to change laws that conflict with global trade rules or mandate huge fines if we want to keep our own laws.

While the American people “get it,” the president and much of Congress continue to lag behind, ignoring the obvious reality that U.S. trade policies are a failure. The president’s former chief economic advisor even argued that the exporting of American jobs is actually a good thing.

The trade deficit in 2004 hit a record $617 billion. This deficit poses a threat to our economic security. At the low end, economists estimate that every $1 billion added to the trade deficit results in the loss of 10,000 jobs. This year’s deficit will result in seven million fewer jobs here at home.

According to the Oregon Blue Book, by 2000, work at 57 Oregon plants had been shifted to Mexico or Canada in response to NAFTA. Since 1994, Oregon has lost more than 40,000 jobs due to failed trade policies.
Supporting Our Troops...

More than 600 members of the Oregon National Guard returned from Iraq in March. These soldiers and the hundreds more still deployed in Iraq and Afghanistan, have answered the call to duty.

But too often, the president and Congress have been missing in action when it comes to fulfilling the government's obligation to them. That's why I voted repeatedly for billions of dollars for protective equipment like body armor and armored vehicles and to increase the size of the active duty all-volunteer military by 39,000 troops to reduce our overdeployment of Guard and Reserve units.

I have been pushing the president and secretary of defense to accelerate the training and equipping of the Iraqi military and police forces so we can get our troops off the front lines and bring them home as soon as possible.

To learn about resources for returning troops, please visit my Web site or call my office at 1-800-944-9603.

The trade deficit also poses a threat to our national security. The U.S. must borrow nearly $2 billion every day from foreigners, including China, Japan and OPEC members, to finance the trade deficit. With an international debt of $5.7 trillion, our economy is becoming more vulnerable to foreign debt holders. Our trade deficit has positioned foreign governments and investors to attempt takeovers of critical U.S. businesses like the oil company Unocal or icons like Maytag.

I have voted against the free trade agenda of presidents from both parties including the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), most-favored nation status for China and U.S. participation in the World Trade Organization, among other trade failures. Now the president wants to expand NAFTA to Central America (CAFTA). I will vote no.

I have also supported several bills to fix U.S. trade policies:

H.J.Res. 27 - withdraws the U.S. from the WTO;
H.R. 728 - pulls China's special access to the U.S. market;
H.R. 1216 - allows tariffs to be imposed against subsidized goods from non-market economies like China;
H.R. 1498 - allows tariffs to be imposed in response to China's manipulation of its currency (which artificially lowers the cost of its goods on world markets).

We cannot continue to expand these failed trade policies. We must go back to the drawing board and create a trade policy that actually improves prospects for American workers and strengthens the American economy. I'd like to be able to once again buy products with a “Made in the U.S.A.” label.

Sustaining Rural Oregon

Due to a decline in the timber industry in the late 1980s, heavily timber-dependent counties across the country suffered depleted local budgets. The “county payments” program was created to provide a guaranteed level of funding based on an annual average of timber sale receipts. Thirty-two Oregon counties and dozens of school districts received payments through the program totaling over $273 million last year.

This program is the lifeblood of rural counties and schools across America, and must be renewed by 2006, when the current program expires. But the bill is currently stalled in the Agriculture Committee.

This spring, Rep. Greg Walden and I worked together in the Resources Committee to usher through the county payments bill. The Secure Rural Schools and Community Self Determination Reauthorization Act would reauthorize the successful “county payments” law for seven more years.

When Congress created the county payments program in 2000, we faced the challenge of bringing together groups on far ends of the political spectrum. This time our challenge is not partisanship, but a tight budget and growing federal deficit. The White House has stopped short of fully endorsing this vital legislation, and passage will not become a reality without the full backing of President Bush.

...And Honoring Our Veterans

The president and Congress continue to short-change veterans. National veterans groups vigorously criticized the budget that President Bush submitted for the Veterans Administration, which fell $2.6 billion short of the funding necessary to meet the needs of current veterans and those returning from the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. Their statements can be seen at the veterans section of my Web site: http://defazio.house.gov/Veterans.shtml.

I supported an amendment to increase funding for vets programs by $2.6 billion by reducing the tax cut for millionaires in 2006 from $140,000 to $129,000. Congress defeated the amendment, prioritizing the wallets of millionaires over adequate care for veterans.

In June, the administration finally admitted that the VA faces a shortfall of at least $1 billion this year and $2.6 billion next year. Belatedly, on June 30, the House approved, and I supported, adding $1 billion to the VA budget for this year. But more needs to be done, which is why I am supporting H.R. 515, the Assured Funding for Veterans Act.
It has been nearly a decade since an Oregon lawmaker has been in a prime position in Congress to help bring long-term economic viability and job creation to Oregon. I had an opportunity this year to play a leading role in crafting the Transportation Equity Act: a Legacy for Users (TEA LU)—a multi-year, nearly $300 billion highway and transit spending bill.

For every billion dollars of investment in transportation infrastructure, the Department of Transportation estimates that 47,500 jobs are created and $6.1 billion in economic activity is generated. Funding road, bridge and transit improvements is an investment that will pay dividends for years to come.

Unlike most other government programs, the funding for TEA LU does not add to the federal deficit. TEA LU is fully paid-for through the Federal Highway Trust Fund, which is sustained with gas tax receipts.

Oregon is facing a major transportation problem. I-5 is a critical commercial route, and is recognized by Congress as a high priority corridor. Safe and efficient travel on I-5 is crucial to the economic vitality of the state and nation. But the roads and bridges along the I-5 corridor are beginning to wear out, and the state faces a $4 billion-plus backlog in repairs and reconstruction.

Rep. DeFazio and Lane County officials discuss the importance of investing in our infrastructure to create jobs and stimulate the economy, during a press conference at the site of the new federal courthouse in Eugene.

Oregon has done its part to raise revenue for infrastructure investment. It's time for the federal government to put our gas tax money to work rebuilding bridges on I-5, mitigating traffic congestion and improving transit.

The Supreme Court recently ruled that a state or local government can seize an individual’s property to benefit private economic development interests. This ruling greatly expands the extraordinary power of governments to take property under eminent domain. Groups ranging from the NAACP to the American Farm Bureau oppose this ruling.

This ruling could also have alarming implications for local elections as corporate developers could seek out candidates willing to condemn private property to promote their economic development plans.

Congress failed to take a stand on this very case two years ago. I offered an amendment to the Coast Guard and Maritime Transportation Act of 2003, to prevent the siting of a Coast Guard museum on property taken by eminent domain. The amendment would have blocked the siting of the museum in New London, Connecticut and protected private homes from being seized by the local government. With a Republican majority in the House, the amendment failed 199-221.

But Congress still has a chance to act. That’s why I joined the Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Rep. James Sensenbrenner (R-Wis.) to introduce legislation to protect private property rights. HR 3135, would deny the use of federal economic development funds for private development projects on land seized by eminent domain.

Stop Skyrocketing Gas Prices

This summer, the price of a barrel of oil soared over $60, adding nearly $20 billion every month to the trade deficit. Gas prices also hit new highs in tandem with record oil company profits.

The response of Congress has been to push a pathetic excuse for an energy bill that wouldn’t have been good policy in the 1950s, let alone meet the challenges of the 21st Century. We need a new energy policy with a goal of U.S. energy independence, based on efficiency and domestic energy with new technologies.

We also need relief in the short-term: 1) put a moratorium on oil company mergers; 2) mandate increased fuel efficiency standards; 3) file a complaint with the WTO against OPEC for illegally colluding to raise oil prices; 4) develop a "Manhattan" program to develop new efficient sustainable technologies.

Seniors’ Privacy at Risk

My staff recently discovered an unknown provision included in the complex, more than $700 billion-over-budget Medicare prescription drug law passed by Congress in 2003, which puts seniors’ privacy at risk.

Under the Medicare Modernization Act of 2003, insurance companies will have access to the names, phone numbers and addresses of millions of Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries.

The law circumvents the Do Not Call registry, allowing private insurance companies to call seniors directly to sell their complicated new plans.

I offered an amendment to prevent this direct violation of privacy, but it was struck down in favor of the profits of private insurance companies. I plan to encourage my colleagues in the Senate to offer similar legislation to protect the privacy of our parents and grandparents.
Join Me at a Town Hall Meeting

I have held 352 town hall meetings across southwest Oregon, since I came to Congress. I have developed many legislative initiatives based on my conversations with Oregonians at these meetings. Please check the dates and times below for a meeting near you. I look forward to speaking with you and your neighbors about current federal issues.

Social Security Update

After dozens of staged town hall meetings, a blue ribbon commission, and a handful of high profile hearings in Congress, the president has yet to convince Americans that partial-privatization is a viable option to address the possible future financial shortfall facing Social Security. Americans understand that privatization of Social Security means a severe cut in benefits, a tax hike or debt increase, in addition to high administrative costs and risk with individual private accounts.

Rather than replace the program with a private system, I have a plan to address the potential financial challenges facing Social Security, sustain the guaranteed earned benefits under the popular program and provide a tax cut for most Americans. My plan would exempt the first $4,000 in wages from the payroll tax (providing a tax cut for those who earn less than $94,000 a year); remove the $90,000 limit on earnings subject to the FICA tax; protect Social Security surpluses; and diversify Social Security investments, among other improvements.
